A legacy of love for the land and growing beautiful plants was first started by Gustav Teufel in 1890. Since that humble beginning in a greenhouse next to his home, each generation has nurtured and added to the traditions begun so many years ago.

The extended Teufel family would come together during the Christmas shipping season.

We approach every project, large or small, with an insight that can only come from working with the land for over one hundred years.

In 1940, George, and his son, Alfred, together with Oregon State University, developed two superior varieties of holly, Teufel's Silver Variegated and Teufel's Hybrid Green.

The Teufel family continues to research the development of the holly plant as well as some of the unpredictable characteristics of the plant. They can unreservedly claim that no other company does more to insure their customers of receiving the finest holly on the market today.

Teufel Holly Farm | Portland Oregon since 1890

Shortly after arriving in the Pacific Northwest from his native Germany in the early 1880's, Gustav Teufel began a small landscape gardening business from his home in the West hills of Portland, Oregon. He worked with many plants and shrubs in the yards and gardens but it was English Holly that fascinated him most. He carefully gathered the trimmings from select holly trees and took them home, where he made cuttings that he and his wife planted in the greenhouse they had built next to their home. Both the home and the greenhouse are still standing on the original forty-acre holly farm. Several new varieties of holly were propagated by the family, two of which are currently marketed by Teufel Holly Farms under the trade names Silver Variegated Holly and Teufel's Hybrid, a beautiful deep green holly.

The Teufel family has committed themselves to continuing the family tradition of excellence and superior quality set by their forefathers over more than one hundred years ago.
