Frank W. Fuller Jr.
 Election of Frank W. Fuller Jr. as a director of United Air Lines to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Niles Trammel brings to that board a man who is as familiar with aviation as many an airline employee. Mr. Trammel resigned because he was moving from Chicago to New York, whereas 70 per cent of United's business is west

Frank W. Fuller, Jr., San Francisco business man and famous sportman pilot was elected a director of United Air Lines Wednesday. It marks his entrance into commercial aviation.
